Lajoie has branded the stories that he was one of the conspirators as a deliberate lie, and the writer believes he is speaking the truth in this assertion.

There is work right here for the national commission, and this body should act at once. It is a very serious offense for a ball club to deliberately conspire to give a man enough base hits to cinch a prize. It is a travesty on baseball, and the offense is just as serious as "throwing" a game. An immediate investigation is demanded. And when the ssion gets to the bottom of it the guilty ones should be punished, not by fining them, but by keeping them out of baseball. The manager and owners of the club are just as bad as the players who figured in this fiasco. They should have prevented and could have prevented and the All-Stars, under the management it. LIFE'S TROUBLES.

I walk through the streets of the city, as gay as a bumblesome bee, and my heart it is singing a ditty of gladness and sunshine and glee; and then I encounter some fellows-the heart music suddenly stops; for they lean on their green umbrellas, and talk of the weather and crops. I call at the home of a lady; my heart and my soul are at ease; I swallow some drinks lemonady, and pretzels, and fragments of cheese; I'm speaking of poets and mystics-how quickly the mercury drops. For some one is springing statistics concerning the weather and crops! Attired in my modest alpaca, and collar of Byronic roll, I call at the store for tobacco, for smoke always comforts my soul; I light up my trusty old brier, when in come some chin-whiskered Pops; their voices rise higher and higher, discussing the weather and crops. Sometimes, when I contemplate dying, I feel a cold thrill of despair; I fear that the seraphim flying around in the ether up there, may weary of singing their chorus, and send their harps back to the shops, and sit in a circle and bore us with talk of the weather and crops.
